A NEW GRADUATE PROGRAM IN ISRAEL STUDIES AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND

The Gildenhorn Institute for Israel Studies is beginning a new multidisciplinary graduate program this fall, to be called the Kay Advanced Israel Studies Program. It will include generous graduate fellowships for qualified students, who will constitute an elite cohort known as the Jack Kay Distinguished Graduate Fellows in Advanced Israel Studies. Application material will be available this fall for prospective students thinking of beginning graduate study in the fall of 2013.

Fellowship grants will be offered to students interested in concentrating their graduate work on Israel within one of these departments at the University of Maryland:

Applicable Graduate Programs:
- Jewish Studies
- History
- Government and Politics
- Communication

If you are thinking about graduate school for History or a social science and are interested in Israel, this is an opportunity to get in on the ground floor of what will soon be one of the best programs of its type in the country, with a likelihood of significant, possibly full, financial aid. The program is already adding new faculty members, who will work closely with students to provide a truly special graduate studies experience. We urge you to follow up on this to see if it’s right for you.

If you may be interested in applying for this, please make an appointment as soon as possible with Professor Paul Scham at pscham@umd.edu.

The deadline for applications is December 15, 2012.
